Proventus is a privately held company that invests in companies in change. Proventus provides development capital through investments in public corporate bonds, leveraged loans and private corporate loans to mid-sized companies in need for growth and restructuring capital. Within the scope of this investment direction Proventus invests its own and external funds through the co-investment vehicle Proventus Capital Partners. In addition, Proventus also actively contributes to the development of its equity holdings and operates an internal asset management. Our current projects include a number of investments in public corporate bonds and private corporate loans as well as equity holdings such as BRIO AB, o2 Produktion AB, J. Lindeberg AB, Artek Oy and Tom Dixon. Apart from the investment operations, Proventus is also engaged in research through Glasshouse Forum and in the arts through the cultural institutions Magasin 3 Stockholm Konsthall and the Jewish Theatre. Proventus was founded in 1980 and is owned by Robert Weil.
